We note that an El Paso beggar was given a jail sentence of sixty days for asking the Chief of Police of that place for 10¢ with which to buy a cup of coffee while a Chicago highwayman was given a term of thirty days in the city bastille for knocking down a pedestrian and relieving him of his valuables. Instances of this kind are of every day occurrence and lead one to the belief that there is no established standards of justice commensurate with the crime committed.

The Committee on Constitutional Instruction of the National Security League has sent the State Department of Education a draft of a Bill which requires the teaching of the Constitution of the United States in the public schools of the State.

Three states in the Union have accepted this principle and passed a simple law making it compulsory to teach the Constitution in their schools, Iowa, Illinois and Michigan. It is the purpose of the Committee to have such a law passed in the other forty-five states and then to ask the educators to secure and institute the best impression upon school children by charade, play or project method of reaching the young mind.

The Constitution has around it romance, adventure and all the interesting vents in the history of our country and can be taught not as a dry subject, but as one of great interest. Many radical groups that now exist will be either weakened or cease to be if our people understand the justness of our Constitution and its elasticity, if occasions arise to amend it.

The Committee further asks for the cooperation of all State Superintendents of Public Instruction and has advised State Superintendent Conway that his name has been added to the "Committee on Constitutional Instruction."

Mr. Lloyd Taylor, Secretary of the Committee, in advocating the proposed bill, adds the following "In order to elevate the quality of the franchise of the United States, it is necessary for the voter to understand the rules by which the game of government is played; rules which were made one hundred and thirty-five years ago. This is the Constitution. Its teachings has been sadly neglected."

COUNTY BOUNDARY LINE SETTLED

The County Commissioners of Harding and Quay County also the County Surveyors of the two counties and the District Attorney met at Logan Wednesday of this week to settle the boundary dispute between the two counties near Logan. In some manner the clerk in engrossing the final bill which created Harding County made an error in the Southern boundary line of the county throwing Logan into the New county. It was not the intention of the bill to include Logan in Harding County, hence the straightening out of the matter at Logan, Wednesday.

A shipload of supplies contributed by the people of the southwestern coast states will leave San Pedro, California, on February 28, bound for Batum, the Black Seaport of Transcaucasian Russia, according to word received at the southwestern headquarters of the Near East Relief in Phoenix. The relief ship, the "Ohioan," will carry food and clothing for the refugees of Armenia and Southwestern Russia.

A cable recently received by the relief organization stated that the arrival of the relief ship "Allagash" from Pennsylvania, was the occasion for an enthusiastic demonstration by the population of Batum.

City officials and all American members of the population, including relief workers and business men, met the vessel on the wharf. The natives paraded with flags and banners bearing inscription in English and Armenian, and a holiday was declared to celebrate the event.

The vessel, the cable stated, had been delayed by heavy storms en route and its failure to arrive had caused grave anxiety to Batum and in the Armenian cities of the interior where food supplies in American orphanages and other institutions were almost exhausted. The vessel's captain reported that the storms experienced on the trip were more severe than any he had been through in twenty-five years and damaged the ship to such an extent that a two weeks lay-over for repairs was made at the Azores.

The "Allagash" carried a cargo of more than five thousand tons of food stuffs, most of it contributed by Pennsylvania school children. Grain donated by farmers of the middle west was also carried.

Captain E. A. Yarrow, director general of the Near East Relief for the Transcaucasian area through whom the message announcing the arrival of the "Allagash" was sent, reported that the big cargo will go only a short way towards filling the vast need of the Armenian famine belt. He said that it will be used largely to replenish the almost exhausted supplies in the orphanages scattered about the district and that little will be available for more than 150,000 other destitute people, mostly women and children, who are dependent upon the relief organization in this region.

"BREAKFAST AND ITS RELATION TO HEALTH"

(By Helen Barr.)

The best food will not make healthy children without attention to the whole daily program. Regular hours, not only for meals but for going to bed and in the case of very young or delicate children, for rest during the day, enable the child to use his food to the best advantage. Children need to get to bed early to rest. Even if they put in the same number of hours going to bed late, this is not as restful for them. Lack of sufficient rest is a common factor in under-nutrition. In the morning they must be awakened in time to eat breakfast without hurry and to secure a bowel movement afterwards.

Training Children's Appetites.
Normal healthy children have good appetites. The child who continually has not should be examined by a physician to find out what it wrong. Often the cause is bad feeding or fatigue but it may be some physical defect which needs special treatment.

Good appetites need to be trained. A child's likes and dislikes are no signs of what he ought to eat. Though they must be taken into account and be dealt with tactfully. There are many ways of interesting children in the food they ought to eat—stories, ideals of health and strength, diversion of their attention to other things instead of centering it on whether they do or do not like a particular food served them. It is better not to consult young children about what they would like to have but assume that they will eat what is set before them.

It is not wise to force large quantities of distasteful food upon a child. Small portions should be allowed and care taken that the food is prepared as acceptably as possible, until the habit of liking is acquired. One does not excuse a child from washing his ears because he does not like to do it, but urges him on till the habit is fixed.

As a foundation for children's desserts, milk is unsurpassed. Junkets, custards, Rice, Tapioca and bread puddings in great variety have many qualities to commend them for growing children. For the child who is not easily trained to drink milk, it is possible to combine the whole day's quart in such dishes.

Today the child may eat bread in addition to the cereal, tomorrow may be content with less than a single slice or not satisfied with less than two.

BREAKFAST, TUESDAY

Scraped raw apple or baked apple or whole raw apple, skin and all, when the child can be trusted to use his teeth. Whole wheat meal porridge and pasteurized milk. Whole wheat bread or toast, pasteurized butter and honey.
